

Expert pool: Knowledge resources

Working together with academics in a changing HE environment.

Thursday 13 October: 11.00 – 12.30 (CEST)

By: Cheryl Coveney (OUUK)

Short introduction

How Librarians collaborate with academics to embed digital and information literacy skills, e resources and create synchronous, real-time engagement opportunities with Distance learners at The Open University. (UK) How Librarians collaborate with academics to embed digital and information literacy skills, online resources and create real-time live engagement opportunities with students at The Open University (UK)

Goal of online event

To raise awareness and share ideas and good practice, to discuss what happens when we put the tools into action.

Abstract

Librarians at The Open University collaborate with module teams to embed skills activities, resources and live engagement sessions into the taught curriculum .

This case study will outline the processes involved, review the outcomes, and examine the chain a changing environment. What happens when academics directly author their own learning content, or when Librarians are asked to provide support for MOOCs or commercial partnerships?